The University Archives include documents and records of Chattanooga University (1886-1889), US Grant University (1889-1907), the University of Chattanooga (1907-1969), and the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga (1969-present). There is also some items pertaining to Zion College and the Chattanooga City College. Also available in the University Archives are items such as photographs, school yearbooks, mater's theses and honors papers, bound and microfilmed copies of the school student newspaper, The Echo, and past University course catalogs and bulletins.

Online Exhibit of historic University photographs: Chattanooga University, Grant University and the University of Chattanooga; Sports Photographs over the years; the Presidents and Chancellors of the University.

The Special Collections request at least a 24 hour notice for information and document retrieval for most items in the University Archives. In some cases documents and information may not be found in the University Archives requiring researchers to go to a specific department on campus for that information.

Note for Researchers: The University Archives contain very little, if any, information pertaining to students and alumni. We have copies of yearbooks (The Moccasin) from 1911 until the last year the University issued one, 1991. There are some holes in our collection, mainly in the early years and during the World War II years, 1941-46. The student newspaper (The Echo) was begun in 1906 and is still published today, on a weekly basis. The Echo website (www.utcecho.com) has provided a searchable database for issues beginning in 2001. The University Archives has both hard copies and microfilmed copies of The Echo. An index, covering the years 1906-1988, can be found here.

Pictures, left to write: Old Main, first building on campus, built in 1886, razed in 1917; President Edward Lewis, first president of Chattanooga University, 1886-1889; early faculty of Chattanooga University.
